Document Technologies, Inc. and Skyline Legal Technologies Announce Merger

Combined company will be among the nation's largest independent providers of litigation support and document outsourcing

New York, NY – June 4, 2007 – Document Technologies Inc. (DTI), a comprehensive document and technology solutions provider for legal professionals and select corporate clients, and Skyline Legal Technologies, a New York-based leader in document management services that provides a wide range of litigation support services to the NY legal community, today announced the merger of their two companies. The merger went into effect June 1, 2007. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

DTI is an end-to-end national legal solutions provider offering a full range of litigation support services including electronic discovery, document productions nationwide, professional and IT solutions and facilities management services. Skyline is a leading provider of legal technology and litigation support solutions to clients in New York and throughout the U.S.

Representatives from both companies agree that the merger will leverage the strengths of the two companies, providing greater service to clients and greater professional opportunities to employees.

“Continued growth in the New York market is among DTI’s primary objectives. We believe the best path to achieving this is in partnering with a proven company that shares our vision for success,” stated John Davenport Jr., Chief Executive Officer of DTI. He added, “Skyline is the unquestionable leader in the New York area in terms of its brand, people, market share, track record of growth, strong customer service reputation and solid foundation of client relationships.”

“Skyline sees in DTI an innovative national company that shares our commitment to client service, our core values and our commitment to our employees and our clients,” said Michael McGowan, President of Skyline Legal Technologies. “By partnering with DTI, Skyline will offer clients a broader platform of services, support tools, and additional footprint allowing them to be better prepared for the changing demands of their business,” he continued.

Skyline Legal Technologies will now be known as DTI Skyline. DTI Skyline will retain most of its operational management responsibilities, allowing it to continue delivering high-touch service to its clients and supporting the New York legal community as they have for the past 12 years.
